INTRODUCTION

Judiciary in Turkey, along with the legislative and executive power, is one of the three powers, and in accordance with Article 9 of the Constitution, judicial power vests in independent courts on behalf of the Turkish Nation.

Turkish justice system consists of many courts and institutions based on the principles of independence and impartiality, which are not interconnected, and their duties and powers are regulated by laws.

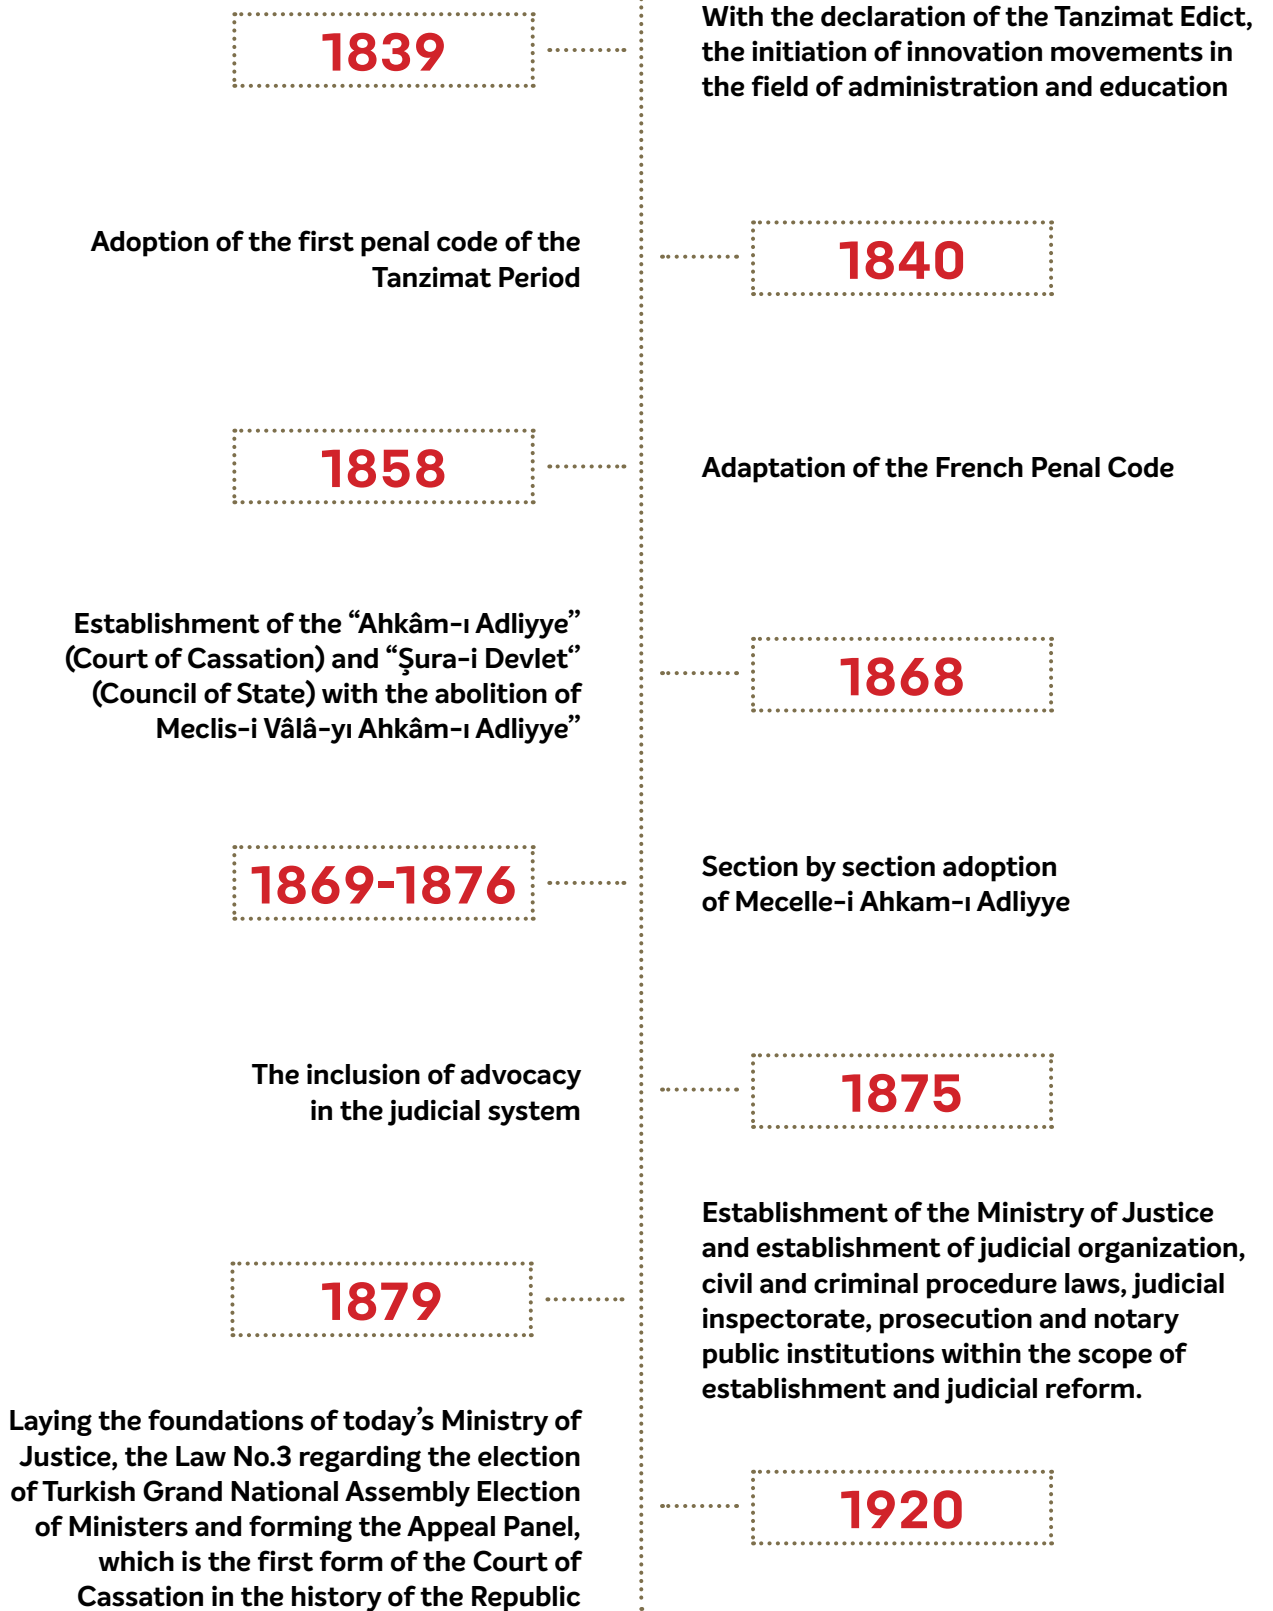

Accordingly, the Turkish judicial system is divided into civil and criminal divisions (courts of first instance, regional courts of justice, Court of Cassation), administrative division (first instance courts, regional administrative courts and the Council of State), constitutional division (Constitutional Court) and conflicts jurisdiction (Court of Conflicts). In addition, the Council of Judges and Prosecutors, the electoral jurisdiction (Supreme Electoral Council) and the accounts jurisdiction (Court of Accounts) are also included in the judicial system.

Each of these institutions is independent in their own field and does not interfere with one another.

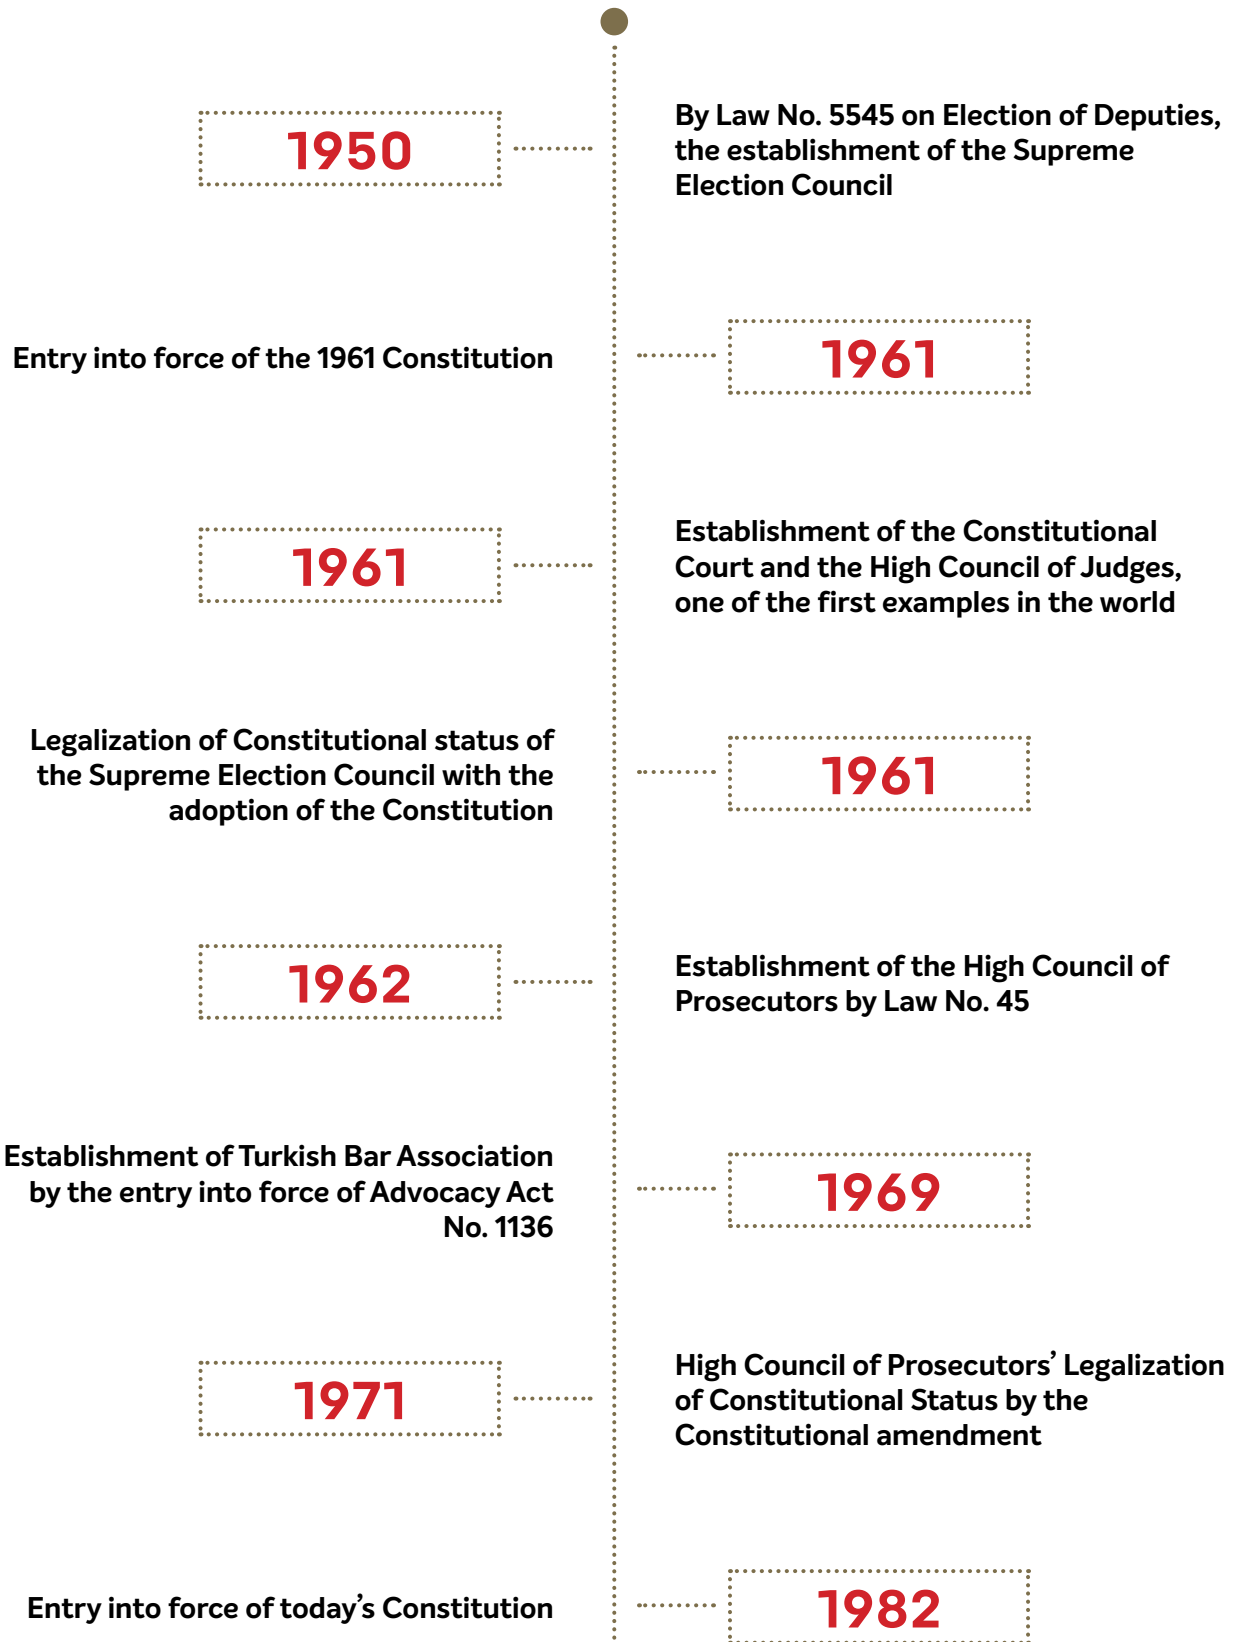

The Ministry of Justice is responsible for the determination and development of key policies for the justice system and providing of justice services in an accessible, effective and efficient manner.

This booklet which aims to promote Turkey's justice system in general lines was prepared by the Justice Academy of Turkey and the Directorate General for Foreign Affairs and the European Union of the Ministry of Justice.

Tax courts generally hear cases by a panel of 3 judges, the presiding judge and two member judges. However, cases the monetary value of which is below the certain threshold set out by law are ruled by a single judge.

CONSTITUTIONAL COURT

The Constitutional Court is regulated by the Articles between 146-153 of the 1982 Constitution. Nonetheless, by the adoption of the Law No. 6771 on the Amendments to the Constitution, the organization, duties and powers of the Constitutional Court have been recently reorganized.

The Constitutional Court consists of fifteen members.

The Grand National Assembly of Turkey elects, by secret ballot, two members from among three candidates to be nominated by and from among the president and members of the General Assembly of the Court of Accounts, for each vacant position, and one member from among three candidates nominated by the heads of the bar associations from among self-employed lawyers. In this election to be held in the Grand National Assembly of Turkey, for each vacant position, two thirds majority of the total number of members is required for the first ballot, and absolute majority of total number of members is required for the second ballot. If an absolute majority cannot be obtained in the second ballot, a third ballot is to be held between the two candidates who have received the greatest number of votes in the second ballot; the member who receives the greatest number of votes in the third ballot is elected.

The President of the Republic of Turkey elects the remaining twelve members. Accordingly, the President of the Republic appoints three members from the Court of Cassation, two members from Council of State from among three candidates to be nominated, for each vacant position, by their respective general assemblies, from among their presidents and members; three members, at least two of whom being law graduates, from among three candidates to be nominated for each vacant position by the Council of Higher Education from among members of the teaching staff who are not members of the Council, in the fields of law, economics and political sciences; four members from among high level executives, self-employed lawyers, first category judges and public prosecutors or rapporteurs who have served for at least five years in the Constitutional Court.

The Constitutional Court examines the constitutionality, in respect of both form and substance, of laws, presidential decrees and the Rules of Procedure of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey, and decide on individual applications. Constitutional amendments shall be examined and verified only with regard to their form. However, presidential decrees issued during a state of emergency or in time of war and international treaties, which came into force cannot be brought before the Constitutional Court alleging their unconstitutionality as to form or substance.

There are two ways of bringing a case before the Constitutional Court with respect to the unconstitutionality claims. The first one is called annulment case. The President of the Republic, the groups of two political parties which have the highest number of members in the Grand National Assembly of Turkey and a minimum of one-fifth of the total number of members of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey have the right to apply for annulment action directly to the Constitutional Court, based on the assertion of the unconstitutionality, in form and in substance, of laws, of presidential decrees, of Rules of Procedure of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey or of certain articles or provisions thereof. The second one is called claim of unconstitutionality before other courts. If a court hearing a case finds that the law or the presidential decree to be applied is unconstitutional, or if convinced of the seriousness of a claim of unconstitutionality submitted by one of the parties, it shall postpone the proceedings until the Constitutional Court decides on the matter. The Constitutional Court shall decide on the matter and declare its judgment within five months of receiving the contention.

In addition to the types of cases mentioned above due to the amendments made to the constitution everyone may apply to the Constitutional Court on the grounds that one of the fundamental rights and freedoms within the scope of the European Convention on Human Rights which are guaranteed by the Constitution has been violated by public authorities.

Moreover, the Constitutional Court in its capacity as the Supreme Court shall try the President of the Republic, the Speaker of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey, Vice-Presidents of the Republic, Ministers, presidents and members of the Constitutional Court, Court of Cassation, Council of State, Council of Judges and Prosecutors, Court of Accounts, and Chief Public Prosecutors and Deputy Public Prosecutors, the Chief of General Staff, the commanders of the Land, Naval and Air Forces, for the crimes committed regarding their duties.

The Constitutional Court also deals with the dissolution of political parties, auditing of acquisitions, revenue and expenditure of political parties, the appeals against the decisions of lifting parliamentary immunity of a deputy and the loss of membership of a deputy and electing the President of the Court of Conflicts.

COURT OF CONFLICTS

The Court of Conflicts is a high court, which is empowered to deliver final judgments in conflicts between civil/criminal and administrative/tax courts concerning their jurisdiction and judgments.

The Court of Conflicts is composed of one president, six member justices and six reserve justices. The office of president of this Court is chaired by a member elected by the Constitutional Court from among its own members. The duties of the court are specified on Article 1 of the Law on the Establishment and Functioning of the Court of Conflicts.

In cases, where it is obligatory to apply for arbitration in accordance with private law, if the duty of the arbitration has been fulfilled by the judge the authority of it shall be deemed as on of the above-mentioned civil or administrative judicial authorities according to the subject matter of the case.

At the Court of Conflicts the cases are overseen without hearings and are decided by the majority of the votes, unless otherwise stipulated by the law.

SUPREME ELECTORAL COUNCIL

The Supreme Electoral Council, which is organized under the title of “General Management and Supervision of Elections” of the 1982 Constitution is the highest electoral authority in Turkey. The Supreme Electoral Council is tasked with supervising all the actions and have them executed to ensure the fair and orderly conduct of elections from the beginning to the end, carrying out investigations and taking final decisions, during and after the elections, on all irregularities, complaints and objections concerning the electoral matters, and receiving the electoral records of the members of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey and presidential election.

The Supreme Electoral Council is composed of seven justices and four reserve justices. Six of the members are elected by the General Assembly of Court of Cassation and five of the members are elected by the General Assembly of Council of State from amongst their own members by the vote of the absolute majority of the total number of members through secret ballot for six years. The members of the Court can be re-elected. The board delivers its decisions by absolute majority.

COURT OF ACCOUNTS

The Court of Accounts is a constitutional institution, which is in charge of supervising and inspecting all the income and expenses and the property of public administrations, social security institutions and local administrations within the scope of the central government budget on behalf of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey and also tasked with finalizing the accounts and transactions of the responsible persons and performing the examination, supervision and adjudication given by the laws.

The Court of Accounts is an institution that has functional and institutional independence while conducting investigations, auditing and reaching binding final judgments. The Court of Accounts is a Supreme Auditing Institution, which has jurisdiction authority, fulfills its duties and responsibilities through its councils.
